London, Oct. 13.

Twenty thousand unemployed in a mile long procession, the biggest demonstration of the kind ever seen here, attempted to "march on Downing Street" this afternoon and demand work or maintenance while the Cabinet was finishing its report on unemployment, which will be submitted to the joint consideration of the Government and labor leaders to-morrow. In the centre of the great body of marching men was a tiny "core" of Communists who when the lagging steps of the exhausted processionists seemed to indicate the passing of the spirit of defiance with which they had announced their firm intention to hold a demonstration in the forbidden Trafalgar Square attempted to force the troops into a fight with the police. The police a thousand strong accompanied the procession from the start and mounted policemen barred entrance to streets leading to prohibited areas. The strategy of the police was so well planned that it was not until the marchers had reached Cambridge Circus, some distance to the north of Trafalgar Square, that they realized how far they were from their planned objective. A wave of anger passed down the ranks, which immediately broke in two just at the point where marched the little body of Communists.

Try to Pass Police.

This wild little group with fanatical violence rushed at the body of police barring Charing Cross Road, Shaftesbury Avenue and other streets leading to Trafalgar Square and attempted to pass through the blue ranks, followed by the large body of unemployed cheered on by the crowd that had gathered on the fringe of the Circus. The police, not taking any chances, pulled their batons and both mounted and on foot charged the crowd a couple of times, tapping some of the hottest heads. By their discipline and coolness they soon broke up the crowd. As a preliminary to this demonstration the police took good care to clear Whitehall, the immediate entrance to Downing street, of all loiterers. Among those who were sent on their way was a group of Irish enthusiasts who were praying and waiting to cheer the delegates to the Irish conference. But

TO STABILIZE AIRPLANES IN ALL KINDS OF WEATHER

Former French Army Pilot Has Perfected Device

Paris, Oct. 13.

Another step in aviation safety was achieved this week when Georges Aveline, formerly an army pilot, convinced commercial and military aviation authorities here that he had devised an instrument which would preserve automatically the equilibrium of an airplane in flight under any conditions of weather. In a trip by air from Paris to Amsterdam and return Aveline sat watching his instrument work, but did not touch the balancing apparatus himself during the entire flight, which was performed with four passengers, who nervously watched the outcome of the experiment. The new discovery, which has been protected by patents in all countries, permits a pilot to leave his seat and make slight repairs without worrying whether his flying machine runs into clouds banks or adverse wind currents, as the moment the equilibrium is lost a series of electrical switches are set in motion, which immediately right the aircraft. Aveline's discovery also is adapted for night flying, a series of electric bulbs lighting if a dangerous degree of inclination is attempted.

they moved off quietly when requested to do so.

Downing Street Invaded.

by the Associated Press.
London, Oct. 13.—England's unemployment crisis was responsible for notable demonstrations to-day in London, Sheffield and Manchester. The London marchers were prevented from invading Whitehall, but a deputation consisting of five men and one woman, describing itself as the "administrative council of national unemployment," was passed through the police lines and admitted to Premier Lloyd George's official residence in Downing street. The Premier had gone out, and so two of his secretaries received the deputation.

Trafalgar Square, where the leaders hoped to hold a meeting, was surrounded by police two rows deep, while mounted police had been stationed throughout the vicinity to break up processions and gatherings. Other police were assigned to guard banks, jewelry shops, law courts and other places liable to attack. The marchers carried banners, prominent among them being one on which was written in large letters: "Bread or Revolution."

The Cabinet committee on unemployment issued a statement saying that the deputation representing the unemployed, after a conference with the Premier's secretaries, was received by Sir Alfred replied that the Government was engaged in considering various schemes and that the Prime Minister would make a full statement in the House next week. At Sheffield 10,000 jobless assembled and adopted resolutions demanding increased doles, the opening up of trade with Russia and the release of all political prisoners. A deputation visited the Lord Mayor, who promised to put their case before the Ministry of Health. At Manchester several thousands assembled at the Town Hall and sang "The Red Flag." A deputation waited on the Lord Mayor. According to reports the Sheffield and Manchester demonstrations were entirely orderly.

FRENCH WINES GAIN FAVOR IN DRY AMERICA

Big Increase in Exports, Particularly of Champagne.

PARIS, Oct. 13.—French champagne and other fine wines are increasing in demand in the United States "for medicinal purposes." Over 340,000 quarts, valued at 1,595,000 francs, were exported to America during the first six months of this year, according to figures just published by the Ministry of Commerce.

During the corresponding period in 1920 only 121,000 quarts, valued at 645,000 francs, were shipped to America. This liquor is all imported into America under licenses granted by the "Prohibition Enforcement Commission," French statistics say.

SINN FEIN'S COURTS PERIL IRISH PARLEY want a rupture of the negotiations. The New York Herald correspondent here learned that informal contact was established between these two groups of cooler heads to-night, in which trustworthy emissaries are trying to find a way out.

Betting here is that despite the delicacy of the situation to-night—Aveline's discovery also is adapted for night flying, a series of electric bulbs lighting if a dangerous degree of inclination is attempted.

London, Oct. 13.—While both sides in the Irish conference observed the agreement not to give out any information regarding to-day's proceedings, it is understood that more is expected to be accomplished by private conversations between the various delegates, of which there were numerous to-day, than by formal meetings in Downing Street.

Optimism Among Delegates.

Optimism is the prevailing note in both the Sinn Fein and British camps, although it is admitted that the subjects over which a controversy is likely to arise have not yet been reached. This optimism is enhanced by the announcement that the Prime Minister is getting ready to go to Washington, which it is considered he would not do if he believed that the Irish conference was likely to reach a deadlock before he could get back to London.

What financial arrangements are to be made between the two countries if the Sinn Fein accepts the Government's offer is a matter that the Daily Eireann is likely to have explained and put on paper, while the existing state of trade, owing to the boycott, is of particular interest to the Government.

Austen Chamberlain, who had been suffering from indigestion, is sufficiently recovered to attend to-day's meeting, so full delegations were present. Michael Collins made a marked impression on the British delegation, from the Premier down. They found that he was not "the wild man" that he had been pictured by most Englishmen during his fighting days, and is still pictured by those who are politically opposed to the Government's meeting the Sinn Fein delegates. Instead, he appears to be a serious minded man, who has grappled with and mastered the subject of finances as between England and Ireland, and is ready with figures whenever the occasion requires, and, on the other hand, can deal humorously even with such questions.

DUBLIN, Oct. 13.—Commenting on the condition of internment camps in Ireland, the Irish Bulletin alleges that the prisoners are subjected to gross brutality and that the British authorities in Ireland refuse to put a stop to the suffering of the prisoners and submit to an impartial investigation the conditions in the camps. The Bulletin adds: "These facts are becoming known despite the rigorous censorship in the camps and are creating throughout Ireland feelings of disgust and resentment. This atmosphere certainly is not conducive to amity between the British and Irish peoples."
